

We will call this package “Loreley”, a legendary figure from German Romantic literature: a wave, a Mermaid. These mysterious creatures from past myths, are part of our European folklore, and are described as very similar to fairies; but they really resemble more Nymphs, such as Naiads, or Nereides from Greek Mythology. The former were fresh water Nymphs, prophets who also had curing powers, the latter were immortal good creatures who lived in salty waters. You can normally find them in water falls, in sources of streams or rivers and in the sea: they have exquisite voices, which can sometimes be heard over the rippling and bubbling of rivers, or the braking of the waves.
